

The Greenwich Audubon Center opened in 1943 on land donated by Eleanor Clovis Reese and H. Hall Clovis. It was National Audubon Society's first nature education center in the United States.

Our seven miles of trails lead through a rich diversity of habitats, including hardwood forest, meadows, lake, streams, and vernal ponds. A one-mile-long Accessible Nature Trail provides visitors with a range of abilities with access to our sanctuary, and the Nature Play Trail invites our youngest visitors to learn, discover, and explore.

Reminders of the past are stone walls, historic apple orchard, original barn, and New England farmhouse built in 1746.

The Kimberlin Nature Education Center has visitor information, a nature gift store, an art gallery, classrooms, and the Hilfiger Children's Learning Center with interactive exhibits and live animal displays.
